In February 2016, the government announced that by December 2016, all new non-fluoridated water supplies would not be charged the lower rate, 3 pence per litre, but the new, standard rate of 6 pence per litre. This now looks to be rolled out, with a 7 pence per litre rate by September 2018. Many hundreds of thousands of people now have this water supply, and will only be charged once. The Government had announced in 2015, that by March 2016, the charges for electricity would be £51.70 per year (this was frozen in January 2016), but the VAT rate is now back up to 20 per cent. As this is being rolled out to businesses, it will cause prices to rise for the remaining year. We expect more new housing estates to be built after the Budget, so the natural population increase will cause an additional rise in calls, and another rise in fire service calls after the Budget. We are aware that the Fire Service will have to deal with any significant rise in the number of people calling 999 after the Budget, and of course if people become concerned about their own properties, or need urgent rescue services after the Budget, it is expected that their calls will increase.
