Q: Does an attempt to repair a damaged / underinsured motor vehicle constitute a covered repair as defined by a policy's relevant motor vehicle coverage provisions? In the below excerpt from two insurance company policies, the underinsured motor vehicle coverage provisions are identical. Underinsured Motor Vehicle Coverage The following is included in a motor vehicle liability insurance policy: 1. We'll pay damages for bodily injury to an insured person caused by an accident involving an underinsured motor vehicle. This coverage protects a person who is: A. In, on, or exiting the covered auto. And: B. Using a newly acquired auto, an auto you traded in, or a trailer attached to your auto when: 1. The covered auto is being used as a temporary substitute for a covered auto you own that is in the auto pool for parts or repairs. Does an attempt to repair a damaged / underinsured motor vehicle constitute a covered repair as defined by a policy's relevant motor vehicle coverage provisions? For example, say a claims adjuster were to be called in the case of a car accident involving a damaged underinsured motor vehicle. Does it constitute covered repair / coverage if they determine that the insured party(s) can fix the car and the insured motorist signs a repair order, and the insured party(s) then drive the vehicle over a "thru" road to their workplace? If not, is there a way to distinguish between an attempt to repair a damaged / underinsured motor vehicle and any other type of repair (e.g. a person attempting to repair their own car)? A: There may be coverage under the underinsured motor vehicle provisions. The key word being "motor vehicle". You need to know how the damaged vehicle has been registered. It doesn't sound like that was taken into account by the insurer but if the damaged vehicle was registered as a commercial vehicle then there would be coverage.
