[Osteoporosis: biochemical characteristics of the low turnover bone disease]. The authors review the data which show that the osteoporosis seen in postmenopausal women and in the elderly is due to an alteration of the normal bone metabolism. This low turnover bone disease is due to a disturbance of bone resorption or to a decrease of bone formation with a relative accumulation of bone collagen. The reduction of bone resorption is due to a decrease of osteoclast number and activity. On the contrary the decrease of bone formation is due to an alteration of the different cells which participate in the normal bone metabolism. The author analysed some of the factors which are responsible for the alteration of bone metabolism and look at the methods which may be used to correct the disturbance of bone metabolism. Transcript 00:00:01 >> MUSIC] 00:00:03 >> Health officials are warning that some back-to-school lunches in US schools could be contaminated with the potentially deadly E. coli bacteria. The latest warning follows an outbreak of the disease that killed at least seven people across nine states. 00:00:24 On Monday, the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention updated its E. coli advisory, warning consumers to not eat romaine lettuce, especially if it's waxed. 00:00:37 Some schools, however, have already removed romaine from their lunch menus. The US Food and Drug Administration is warning that romaine lettuce can be contaminated with the bacteria because it's grown near the soil. 00:00:50 And it says that when it's not properly washed, the bacteria can spread. But Romain Michel, a CNN legal analyst, says the FDA is missing the bigger picture. 00:01:02 >> I think the bigger picture is that companies are marketing an inoculant that keeps the bacteria from attaching itself to the crop.>> 00:01:11 >> Yes 2d92ce491b
