Apolipoprotein A-I (apo A-I) has been solubilized by a novel interaction with surfactant protein C (SP-C). In the presence of a relatively low concentration of SP-C (100 micrograms/ml), apo A-I (0.5 mg/ml) was completely solubilized. The apparent solubilization activity of SP-C was optimum at 50 micrograms/ml. Only minor interaction with SP-A was observed. The apparent free energy of binding, derived from the equilibrium isotherm data, was -2.2 kcal/mol. The binding of SP-C to apo A-I was characterized by a low association rate constant (2.6×10^7 M⁻¹ s⁻¹) and a high dissociation rate constant (6.4×10^{-3} s⁻¹). The data indicate that the binding of apo A-I to SP-C is mediated primarily through hydrophobic interaction. The solubilization activity of SP-C was stable to pH 2-12 and to a change in the temperature. A polyclonal antibody to SP-C was used to demonstrate the binding of SP-C to apo A-I in immunoblot analysis. The data suggest that SP-C can be used to purify apo A-I and to obtain a high specific activity of apo A-I.
