My personal guess is that it makes it easier to avoid third parties when they want to leak something and maybe there's some kind of Google tax... It probably works (or at least works well enough) for low and mid-end hardware. I doubt they'd develop a custom phone for the likes of Samsung because they'd basically pay the same price and achieve roughly the same result in terms of a customized UX. ----- rnermento I thought it might have been in response to this, but there's not a link in the article: chromes-... ----- mikro2nd I thought I'd read this as "Why don't _they_ develop their own hardware". I read _Why_ as "Why do _you_ develop your own hardware", not "Why do they develop their own hardware". Oh well. [Shoulder pads and padding of the breast in sports]. Sports 2d92ce491b
