1. Field of the Invention The invention relates generally to an apparatus for making purifying pellets of potassium hydroxide as a masterbatch and, more particularly, to a collapsible drum or other mold-type apparatus for forming purifying pellets of potassium hydroxide for incorporation into kitty litter and the like. 2. Description of the Related Art Purifying pellets of potassium hydroxide are currently formed in high volume in large stainless steel cylindrical rotary drum machines and large, expensive, horizontal rotary drum machines with a proportionate total investment in hundreds of thousands of dollars. These machines require constant maintenance, typically in the tens of thousands of dollars per year. In addition to the above, these machines are built on the stainless steel industry standard and as such are not compatible for recycling and recycling of other materials, such as carpet fiber and aluminum can liners, which are typically mixed with the purifying pellets of potassium hydroxide. In view of the above, a substantial need exists for a new and improved apparatus for making purifying pellets of potassium hydroxide for incorporation into kitty litter and the like. Specifically, a need exists for a mold-type apparatus for forming purifying pellets of potassium hydroxide which is easy to disassemble for cleaning and recycling of other materials, such as carpet fiber and aluminum can liners, and which is, in the alternative, collapsible for transport and storage. Nato Secretary General Anders Fogh Rasmussen said there are "no grounds" for extending the mandate of the training mission in Afghanistan beyond 2014. "This is not and has never been about numbers," he said. "This is about the mission which has been agreed on by the international community, on behalf of the Afghan people." He told the BBC's Andrew Marr programme that he was concerned the numbers of US and other Nato soldiers could be reduced. A meeting of Nato ministers in the US ended on Saturday without agreement on a timetable to begin a gradual withdrawal of Nato forces from Afghanistan. In an appearance on Sunday, Belgian Foreign Minister Karel De Gucht told Belgian radio that the talks had been "frank", and that it would be "difficult" to agree on a timetable for beginning the drawdown. The BBC's Mike Wooldridge in Brussels says that Belgium is one of the most committed members of Nato, and the position of its government is likely to be influential. Delivering his first joint news

Takayasu arteritis in children: an analysis of treatment with mycophenolate mofetil and its effect on growth. Children with Takayasu arteritis (TA) require immunosuppression. We studied the efficacy of mycophenolate mofetil (MMF) in maintaining remission in children and the effect of MMF on growth. Children with TA were classified according to the American College of Rheumatology criteria and treated with MMF with or without glucocorticoids (steroid group) or oral hydroxychloroquine (HC) only (HC group). Clinical, laboratory, imaging, and growth data were collected at diagnosis, and after the therapy and a mean followup of 48+/-18 months. Twenty-eight children (17 female, mean age: 13.4+/-2.9 years) were treated (14 steroid group, 14 HC group). The median disease duration was 2.6 years (range: 0.3-11 years). The TA was type V in all cases. The median followup was 38 months (range: 13-78 months). Of 28 patients, 29% (8/28) were in complete remission, 53% (15/28) in partial remission, and 18% (5/28) had active disease. The 2 children with active disease were in the steroid group. Serum creatinine levels and echocardiographic data were not significantly different between children in the steroid group and the HC group (P>0.05). The growth patterns were also similar between the 2 groups, except that, in the steroid group, prepubertal children had shorter (P=0.002) heights than postpubertal children. Children with TA had a long duration of disease. The disease was incompletely controlled with the use of oral HC and steroids alone. MMF was as effective as oral HC in maintaining the remission. No growth impairment due to steroid treatment was detected. v. Reeves , 27 Ill. App. 3d 191, 197-98 (1975), for the proposition that a person who becomes
