* Monitoring, with server bidding: BidSlayer automatically opens a window where you can view all the items that you have watched. BidSlayer then bids for you on behalf of the seller. Whenever there is a bid that exceeds your planned bid amount, BidSlayer notifies you. You can instruct BidSlayer to bid on an item for $XX.XX and when the bidding reaches that amount, BidSlayer will commence bidding on your behalf. You can also stop BidSlayer from bidding for you and alter the auction end time as often as you wish. If you wish, BidSlayer can use your internet connection to achieve server bidding so that it can continue bidding on your behalf. If your PC is switched off, BidSlayer will continue to monitor items and will maintain an up to the minute record of the status of the items that you are watching. BidSlayer is not intended for commercial use but for personal use for a period of not more than 7 days at a time. BidSlayer is not suitable for mass automated bidding on large numbers of items since it does not find the End time automatically. 1. Betamax is a proprietary system of Hitachi, which uses a proprietary analog video recording system to record images on tape. 2. DVD was an attempt at improving on the Beta system in two ways: firstly, the DVD specification was adopted by all major players as it standardized the digital recording system and secondly, it added the compression of data to fit more information on a given amount of space on the tape. 3. High-density digital versatile disk is a DVD that can store significantly more data. The HD DVD specification can store up to 25GB in a single layer on a disk, but only 8.5GB on a single layer of the latest DVD format. 4. HD DVD was backed by all of the major players and was seen as the future successor to DVD. 5. BD was announced as a rival to HD DVD by a consortium of companies, all of whom were initially both competitors and potential partners of the HD DVD consortium. However BD's rivals, headed by the original HD DVD consortium, were primarily manufacturers of DVD players and BD media, so they were effectively led by a group of competing companies who all decided to compete together against HD DVD. 6. BD is the official abbreviation for the "Blu-ray Disc" format. It is also the name of the system to be adopted by the Blu 09e8f5149f
