1. Field of the Invention The present invention relates to an input-output device using a USB or a DisplayPort interface, and a corresponding system and method for inputting or outputting image, video, and audio information to or from the input-output device. 2. Description of the Related Art In recent years, due to the widespread use of computers, various types of devices capable of being connected to a computer for image output and/or image input have been developed. For example, a video projector has been developed in recent years using a network system, which includes a network capable of being connected to a computer, such as a local area network (LAN) or a wide area network (WAN), in order to share images and videos. Such network systems are connected to each other, by way of an interface, to present video, images, or animation information to a viewer. Recently, the need for a high-speed data transfer rate has increased due to the increasingly large size of video files, images, animations, or the like, stored in a computer. Thus, display technology has been improved, such as the increase of the number of pixels in a projective display, the introduction of a high resolution frame buffer, and the increase of the frame rate of the display. Meanwhile, due to the development of various types of computers and the need for video to be outputted to various types of devices, input technology, such as an input device, an input/output (I/O) device, or the like, has been developed. For example, a computer input device, such as a mouse, a keyboard, a trackball, a joystick, or the like, can be used to input desired information from a computer. Generally, to provide a video signal, images, video, or audio, to a display, a video adapter is used to output the video signal to the display. Due to the limitation in the size of a single portable computer, the use of a video adapter is required to output video and images which exceed the size of the single portable computer. The video adapter includes a display to output images to a display and a computer to output video signals for image output to a display. However, the use of the video adapter has a number of disadvantages. First, the use of the video adapter increases costs. Second, the space required for the video adapter is relatively large.
