(Photo: Andrew Harnik/AP) House and Senate Democrats are pushing back against a big fundraising appeal from President Trump and top Republicans, calling the email a “red scare” against supporters of the Democratic Party. “You can only donate to Democratic candidates online in order to make it appear as though you support Democrats,” the email from Trump and Senate Majority Leader Mitch McConnell (R-Ky.) claims. Trump and McConnell are asking their supporters to donate to the National Republican Senatorial Committee (NRSC) and the NRCC, respectively, the two main Republican political groups. “There’s nothing sinister about this,” said one Democratic Senate aide about the appeal. “This is one of the ways they operate.” Donations are verifiable with the Federal Election Commission (FEC) and, according to the aide, the two organizations are more transparent about how they spend their money than the Democratic National Committee (DNC). A McConnell spokesperson told HuffPost that the NRSC and the NRCC are “the most transparent political organizations in Washington.” “What the NRSC does in accordance with the law is a matter of public record,” the spokesperson said. “The NRCC is subject to the same FEC rules as any other political organization.” But the
